HUMOROUS.

"Rappings!"
We had sweet dreams the other night,
When all around was still--
We dreamed we saw a host of folks
Pay up their printer's bill!

Mrs. and Mr. Simpkins.--"Ah, Mr. Simpkins we have not chairs enough for our company," said a gay young wife to her husband.
"Plenty of chairs, ducky, but a little too much company," replied Simpkins.

Philosophers say that shutting the eyes make the sense of hearing more acute. That accounts for the many closed eyes that are seen in our churches every Sunday morning.

Our Pacific coast is becoming "smothered" on vegetables. A pumpkin was raised last year in Oregon, of such size, that the owner had wheels and axles placed under it, and now owes it an omnibus. It runs half hourly trips between Perryville and Sage Dale Court House. Where's "California" at now?

Is it not a matter for surprise that while young ladies are so sedulously taught all the accomplishments that a husband disregards, they are never taught the great one he would prize. They are taught to be exhibitors abroad; whereas he wants a companion at home.

A Good One.--"Caddy, honey, will you buy my watch, now?"
"And it is about selling your watch, you are Mike?"
"Truth it is, darling!"
"What's the price?"
"Ten shillings and a nutcracker of the cream!"
"Is the watch a decent one?"
"Sure, and I've had it twenty years, and it never once deceived me!"
"Well, here's your tin; now tell me, does it go well?"
"Behind, an' it goes faster than any watch in Connaught, Munster, Ulster, or Lonsister, not hating Dublin!"
"Bad luck to you, Mike, then you have taken me in. Didn't you say it never deceived you?"
"Sure an' I did--nor did it--for I never depended on it!"

A little boy, "well in his boots" for the first time, and very proud of them, said to his mother, after reading the customary chapter in Scott's Family Bible in the morning, "Mother, why did'n't Moses wear boots?"
"Why, my son, what makes you ask that? Perhaps he did wear boots my dear; we don't know!"
"No, Mother he didn't, because the Bible says that the voice came out of the burning bush and told him to take 'off his shoes!' There was no reply to this clincher."

"GRANDPA, where do the people get their fashions from?"
"From Boston!"
"Where do the Boston folks get them from?"
"From England!"
"And where do the English get them from?"
"From France!"
"And where do the French get them from?"
"Why, right straight from the devil; there now, stop your noise!"

A mistress, observing that her "help" was much addicted to Methodist hymns, asked her if she belonged to the church.
"No," she replied, "not exactly a member, but I have been tuck in on suspicion!"
"Probation, you mean?"
"No! I don't, (in a sharp key and with a dogmatical manner, I know what I mean)--I was tuck in on suspicion!"

Wouldn't Bite.--"Mother, said a little shaver the other day, 'I know what I would do if I was at sea, and the men were all starving, and they should draw lots to see who should be killed and eaten, and it should fall upon me--I'd jump into the water.'"
"But," said the mother, "they would fish you up!"
"No," said he, "but I wouldn't bite!"

POETRY.

For the Kentucky Tribune.
I CAN NEVER SAY FAREWELL.

TO THEE I NE'ER CAN SAY FAREWELL,
My happy home, my native land;
Chained by love's undying spell,
I ne'er can shake a parting hand.
To thee I ne'er can bid adieu,
Where'er I roam, where'er I stray;
The drinking Eden's Nectar dew,
Thy presence flits across my view.
Oh, no! I ne'er can say good-bye,
Thou Paradise should me surround,
And all the music of the sky,
Yet, would I love thy hallowed ground.
No, no! I ne'er will say farewell,
No friend nor foe shall I ne'er beguile;
I'll praise thy tranquil shores, and tell
The magic of thy sunny smile.
Should e'er thy friends unfaithful prove,
Should all thy foes thy freedom sell,
From thee my soul should never move,
I'd die--but never say farewell.

The Man Who Struck Himself.

BY T. S. ARTHUR.

Jason Elder belonged to that rather large class of persons who find pleasure in the sufferings or misfortunes of their fellow men. This is stating the case rather broadly, and we do not in the least doubt that Jason, should he ever chance to discover this introduction of himself to the public, will reject our classification, so far as he is concerned. We make it, understandingly, however. The fault we have indicated is usually the companion of another. The man who feels pleasure in the misfortune of his neighbor will hardly hesitate to inflict an injury, if it can be done with impunity.

Men of the class to which Jason Elder belonged rarely pass far on their life-journey without misunderstandings with some of their fellow-passengers. Of course, they were always in the right and their fellow-passengers in the wrong. And as they are the injured and the oppressed, it is the most natural thing in the world for them to feel indignant, and quite as natural to retaliate, giving blow for blow.

The man who wrongs me, I neither forgive nor forget. This was one of Jason's sayings, and a very bad saying, because he never declared it to be--particularly in Jason's case, for he who lived up to his principles. Of course, judgment as to wrong was always rendered by himself, and on evidence wholly ex parte. If he believed that another meant to do wrong--he could believe, sometimes, on very slight evidence--an evil purpose was as quickly born in his mind as if positive testimony were before him.

In fact, Jason Elder was a very bad sort of a man, and often very troublesome to those who had any dealing with him. Among those who were favored with the hearty dislike of Elder, was a master mechanic in a small way, named Martin Lee, who, by industry and economy, had accumulated enough to buy himself a house of moderate size as a home for his family. Elder also owned a house in the same neighborhood. These houses were built on a piece of ground that originally belonged to the same estate.

Mr. Lee was a very upright man--too upright and independent to have much intercourse with a man like Elder, and not mortally offend him. He had so offended him, and the offence was not forgiven or forgiven. In more than one instance his enemy had sought to do him injury, but the poisoned arrows, flung from his bow, had flown harmlessly by him.

One day, while in conversation with one of those idle gossiping individuals, who give more attention to other people's business than they do to their own, the latter said, in responding to some ill-natured remark uttered against Mr. Lee:

"I learned a fact yesterday that may be you would like to hear."
"About that Lee?" eagerly inquired Elder.

"Yes, or I might better say, about that ground on which he has built that snug little house."
"Indeed! Our gentleman was alive now, and commenced rubbing his hands in delighted expectation. 'What about the ground?'"

"Title defective," was the laconic reply.
"Not!"
"Fact. Had it from old Larkin; and I rather think he ought to know something about it."
"Well, that is news! Got a bad title, eh? I wonder who's on the hip now, Mr. Martin Lee?"
"But surely, Mr. Elder, said his informant, 'you will not take advantage of this information to injure our friend Lee?'"
"Won't, indeed! Wait and see. If I don't deal him a staggering blow, my name is not Jason Elder--that's all. I always said I'd bite my time. Hat had a flaw in his title. But that's just his way of doing business. I'd like to see any one pick a flaw in mine."

True to the evil purpose declared, Elder took the first opportunity to search out the party to whom the property owned by Lee would revert, in case a defect really did exist in his title, and communicated the fact alleged. This individual, whose name was Earl, seemed incredulous; but when Larkin was mentioned as authority, seemed to feel quite an interest in the matter.

"I am really indebted to you," he said, with a bland smile; "I should have quite a windfall; and it could not have reached me in a better time. I will have the matter investigated at once."

"That blow will tell hard, surely. I had planned it below the fifth rib," said Elder to himself, in a tone of cruel exultation as he left the presence of Mr. Earl.

Through much self-denial and hard labor, continued through many years, had Mr. Lee been able to provide a modest homestead for his family. He had been the more anxious to accomplish this from the fact, that declining health warned him of the approach of a day--how speedily it might arrive, he knew not--when the beloved ones who leaned on him so confidently would have none to care for them. If he could secure a home into which they might cluster together he felt that much would be gained. And this he had accomplished; but the effort cost too dearly. He had taxed his physical system to an extent that produced a serious reduction; and though he had secured a dwelling for his family, he permanently weakened his constitution.

One day, in making a sudden effort, he ruptured a blood vessel, and was taken home in a dangerous condition. This was on the very day that Jason Elder made the unfortunate discovery of a defect in the title of his property. Little dreamed he, as with death knocking at his door, he found consolation in the thought that his family, even if he were taken from them, would not be left without a home; that at the very time, there was a movement on foot to deprive them of their little patrimony. And well for him was it that the veil of ignorance was before his eyes; for had he known of the threatened danger, the knowledge would surely have cost him his life.

On the day following, a gentleman called at the house of Mr. Lee, to notify him that proceedings were about being instituted for the purpose of testing the validity of his title; but hearing that he was dangerously ill, he went away without leaving any word as to the purpose of his business.

In the meantime, Elder, who had not heard of Mr. Lee's illness, was awaiting with some interest to see the ultimate effect of the blow he had struck. There were times when, in a measure, he repented of what he had done. But the repentence was not very deep, and his ill-will towards Mr. Lee soon obliterated all traces thereof.

On the third day Elder received a brief note from Mr. Earl, desiring him to call at his office, as he wished to see him on particular business. There was something in this note that affected Mr. Elder unpleasantly. What it was, however, he could not discover, although he read it over and over again, at least half a dozen times.

"I wonder what he wants with me?" he said, uneasily, as he started off promptly, to obey the summons.

"Ah, Mr. Elder! I'm glad to see you," Mr. Earl smiled, and offered his hand. But there was something wrong in the smile, and no heart whatever in the pressure of his hand.

"I've been investigating that matter you brought up my notice," said Mr. Earl, and his countenance assumed a grave aspect.
"Ah! have you? Well, sir, did you not find it as I said?"
"There is a flaw, certainly, and a very serious one."

"I was sure of it, from what Larkin said. He's never at fault in matters of this kind."
"You aimed a heavy blow at Mr. Lee, my friend," said Mr. Earl. There was a quick change in his manner, followed by a pause. Then he added:

"But it passed him unharmed and struck another!"
"Who?" eagerly inquired Elder.
"Yourself!" was the startling response.
"Me! I do not understand you, Mr. Earl! The countenance of Jason Elder had become suddenly overspread with alarm.

"Mr. Lee's title is perfectly good," "It is!"
"Impossible!" exclaimed Elder, turning pale.
"Not at all. Mr. Larkin is rarely at fault in matters of this kind. He knew there was a flaw somewhere in the property that once belonged to this uncle's estate, but in this instance, Mr. Lee is safe, but your title is not worth a copper. I am much obliged to you for hunting up this windfall for me--I should hardly come across it myself; and in consideration thereof, will deal with you as leniently as possible. Of course, I do not expect you to take my word in regard to the law. Its existence, however, will soon be demonstrated. You had better see your lawyer, and ask him to call on me. In the meantime, I will say that for various reasons, I am ready to compromise. I don't wish to encounter the vexations, delays and expense of legal proceedings; and therefore, if you are disposed to meet me amicably, I will not be too exacting. In a word then, I have in my own mind the sum for which I will execute a quit claim to the property. That sum is five hundred dollars."

Jason Elder groaned aloud.
"If my claim to the property is good--and I know it to be," resumed Mr. Earl--"I can recover three times that sum. If you compromise, I will set in a spirit of great moderation. But if you compel me to resort to law, I will take all the law awards."

Poor Jason Elder! The blow was a heavy one, and it staggered him. A careful examination by his lawyer only proved the assertion of Mr. Earl. His title to the property was not worth a dollar. Glad enough was he to accept the proffered compromise, though at the clear loss of over five hundred dollars!

Well for Mr. Lee was it, that the blow aimed with such bitter malignity, did not execute the will of him by whom it was given. The consequence would, to all human foresight, have proved fatal. Not until he was sufficiently recovered from his dangerous illness to be "out again," did he learn of the evil that had been meditated, and how it had recoiled upon the head of his enemy.

His pointed answer was: "He dug a pit for another, and himself fell into it." The declaration of Elder, made to more than one, that he had struck Mr. Lee a heavy blow, remembered in connection with his serious loss from a defect in his title; and for a long time afterwards, he was spoken of, familiarly, among those who knew him, as "the man who struck himself."

A broad illustration is this, at what is taking place daily, in hundreds of instances, around us. The evil that is meditated against others, usually comes back, in some form, upon those who seek to do their neighbors a wrong. In this matter there is a law of compensation which acts with unerring certainty. The blow that is struck in malice at another, may seem to rebound. But, as surely as it is given, will its power to do harm remain unspent, until the circle of consequences is completed.

A Thrilling Scene.

BY CHAS. RAND.

The following narrative--a true one--describes a scene that actually took place not many years since in a country town in the state of Maine.

One evening in the month of December, eighteen hundred and thirty-four, a number of townsmen had assembled at the store of a Mr. Thomas Putnam, to talk over "matters and things"--smoke--drink--and in short do anything to "kill time."

Three hours had thus passed away--They had laughed, and talked, and drank and chatted and had a good time, generally; so that about the usual hour of shutting up shop, each of the party felt particularly first rate.

"Come," said Charles Hatch--one of the company--"let's all liquor, and then have a game of high, low, Jack!"
"So I say," exclaimed another; "who's got the cork?"

"Fetch us your keords," drawled out a third, his eyes half closed, through the effect of the liquor he had drunk.

After drinking all round, an old pine table was drawn up before the fire place, where burned brightly a large fire of hemlock logs, which would snap and crackle--throwing large live coals out upon the hearth.

All drew up round the table, seating themselves on whatever came handy. Four of them had rolled up to the table some kegs, which from their weight were supposed to contain nails.

"Now," said Hatch, "how shall we play--every one for himself?"
"No--have partners," growled one man.
"I say every one for himself," exclaimed another.
"No, hang it if I'll play so," shouted the former bringing his fist down upon the table, knocking one candle out of the stick, and another upon the floor.

"Come, come," said Hatch, "no quarrelling--all who say for having partners, stand up."
Three arose.
"Now, all who say each one for himself--stand up."
The remaining four immediately got up.

"You see, Barclay," said Hatch, the majority, are against you. Come, will you play?"
"Well, as I don't want to be on the opposite side, I'll play," answered Barclay, somewhat cooled down.

Mr. Putnam was not in the store that evening, and the clerk, who was busy behind the counter, had taken very little notice of the proceedings. About half-past ten, Mr. Putnam thought he would step over to his store and see that everything was safe. As he went in he walked up towards the fire.

When within a few steps of where the men were sitting, he started back in horror. Before him sat seven men, half crazy with drink and the excitement of playing cards. They were there, within a few feet of the fire just described--and four of them seated on kegs of powder!

Barclay--who was a very heavy man, had pressed in the head of the keg on which he sat, bursting the top through, and pressing the powder out through the cracks. By the continued motion of their feet the powder had become spread about the floor, and now covered a space of two feet all around them.

Mr. Putnam's first movement was towards the door, but recovering himself, he walked up towards the fire. Should either of them attempt to rise; he thought--and scatter a few grains a little further into the fire place, where lay a large quantity of live coals!

At that moment Hatch looked up, and seeing Mr. Putnam with his face deadly pale, gazing into the fire, exclaimed: "Good God, Putnam, what ails you?" and at the same time made a motion to rise.

"For Heaven's sakes, gentlemen, do not rise," said Mr. Putnam. "Four of you sit on kegs of powder--it is scattered all around you--one movement might send you all to eternity. There are two buckets of water behind the bar. But keep your seats for one minute, and you are saved--move, and you are dead men!"

In an instant every man was perfectly sober--not a limb moved--each seemed paralysed.

In less time than we have taken to describe this thrilling scene, Mr. Putnam had poured the water, and completely saturated the powder on the floor, and extinguished the fire so that an explosion was impossible. Then, and not till then, was there a word spoken. True Fig.

MORE FACTS FOR THE NEXT EDITION OF UNCLE TOM'S CABIN.--The Richmond (Va.) Common Council have just passed an ordinance as follows:

"Every slave shall be provided each day, by his owner, or if he be in the employment of another person, by his employer, with food sufficient for his sustenance, and a suitable place in which to cook the same, and shall be provided every night with a place of lodging, and with whatever is necessary for his sleeping in the last mentioned place. For every day or night on which there is a failure to make such a provision as to any slave, the person so failing shall be fined not exceeding twenty dollars; such fine shall be imposed notwithstanding the slave shall be furnished with food or other things in lieu of board and lodging."

Oh that our Northern 'Humanitarians' would join in procuring the passage of some such enactment for the benefit of the poor free negroes we have with us here, in the cities of the North. Cannot Mrs. Harriet Beecher Stowe write another book, if possible, to induce the lawgivers of New York, New England, and those particularly free negro loving States of Illinois and Indiana, to provide that, on and after a certain date, 'every black man shall be provided with food sufficient for his sustenance.' Also, that he shall be provided 'every night with a place of lodging.' What a prodigious revolution it would create, to be sure, in and about the Five Points! What an excitement along the docks! What a rejoicing down in the sewers and cesspools into which Northern society thrusts the free colored citizen, to look for his daily bread by day; and to find shelter by night! Such an ordinance, indeed, would make the poor darkey leap for very joy in the dark dingy cool holes and underground cellars of Centre street and West Broadway.

The 'free negro' whom the free State of Illinois has just declared shall have no rest for the sole of his foot on her soil, may well feel down on his knees and 'beg from us just such a law as that which Virginia gives to his black brother in bondage; a law giving him shelter and food and clothing! There is no statutory enactment in New York, or Boston or Philadelphia, or Harrisburg, or Syracuse making it obligatory upon the white man to see that the necessities of the black are provided for. No; the negro here is free--free to starve, if somebody don't throw him a bone that the meanest white man don't want.

As Mrs. Harriet Beecher Stowe has announced as forthcoming a 'Sequel' or 'Key' to Uncle Tom, one would think it she the fair minded, truth-loving woman, we are told she, the Richmond ordinance ought to have some notice.

"When she goes a licensing over sea, among the aristocracy of England, however, who dreams that Richmond will be whispered in Stafford House? Or who suspects that the law of Exclusion, just passed by the free State of Illinois, will be mentioned? Nobody. The dark spots of the 'peculiar institution' will be blacker than ever; but the white streaks will be carefully shut out from the sympathetic John Bull. John, however, should take care, lest our cute Yankee abolitionists, practising on his misplaced sympathy, should humbug him out of his money for the Abolition Societies, here at home. If he have any ready cash to spare, better use it at home, where there is as wide a field for philanthropic effort than send it over here to agitate for Southern negroes, who are infinitely better off in Old Virginia, even, than so-called hundreds of thousands of Her Majesty's subjects are, in poor old Ireland, across the channel. Will the Lords and Ladies--the Dukes and Duchesses--the Marquises and Marchionesses--who are going to turn out to give Uncle Tom a royal reception at Stafford House, think of this?--[N. Y. Express.]

The Dutchman says the navy of Mexico consists of two fishing smacks and a raft--the former mounted with twelve mariners, and the latter with a hen-coop.

The Right of Way.--The following incident was related at the celebration, on the occasion of the completion of the Railroad to La Salle.

A Sucker from the region of 'Egypt,' who had strayed up and 'squatted' on the line where the road was to run, was applied to for the right of a way through his farm.

He objected strenuously, and persuasion appeared to be useless. They'd spoil his farm, and as he had heard, his cattle would all be killed when the locomotive came along.

When told that the company would pay him for all such damages, he met the agent with the reply:

"Why, yes, perhaps they might, if a fellow could catch 'em; but when they come along with one of their 'cow-changers' and tuk off his stock in the night, the darned thing would be in Chicago before he could get up and dress himself!"

A HUNTER OF KENTUCKY.--The correspondent of the Evansville Journal writes as follows about a Kentucky hunter:

Wat Eckman--it wuld do you good to see him--has followed hunting for a livelihood since the year 1831. Since that period he has killed 38 bears, 984 wolves, 3847 coons, 990 foxes, 761 wild geese, 2040 pheasants, 44 ground hogs, 80 wild cats, 14 pole cats, 209 minks, besides squirrel, quail, and other small game beyond his power to calculate. The sum he has realized from his game, skins, &c., falls but little short of twelve thousand dollars.

Whig Meeting in Cumberland.
At a meeting of the citizens of Cumberland county, at the Court House in Burkesville, Ky., on Monday the 11th day of April, 1853. (It being county court day. On motion, Col. LEMUEL WILLIAMS was called to the chair, and Dr. DAVID R. HAGGARD was appointed Secretary. The object of the meeting being briefly explained,

On motion, Dr. David R. Haggard, Joseph Alexander, Col. Milton Smiley and Maj. John M. Baker were appointed a committee to draft resolutions expressive of the sense of the meeting, who thereupon retired, and after consultation made the following report, to wit:

"The time is fast approaching when it will be necessary to elect a member of Congress from this (the 4th) district, and it behooves the Whig party to harmonize and unite upon some candidate in order to secure success, and as there appears to be several Whig aspirants for a seat in the next Congress from this district, it thereby becomes necessary to have a Convention at some suitable place in the district to select a standard bearer of the Whig party in the coming contest. And in view of the fact that Cumberland county was established in the year 1793, and a period of about 55 years has elapsed, during all which time she has uniformly upheld the Whig banner in every conflict, and faithfully maintained and supported the principles of the Whig party, and the nominee of that party, irrespective of his location in the district, and in view of the further fact that Cumberland county has never been honored by the election of one of her faithful citizens to a seat in either branch of Congress, therefore,

Resolved, That it is the opinion of this meeting that a Convention of the Whig party of this district should be held at Liberty, in the county of Casey, on the 1st Monday in June next, to select a candidate to represent this district in the next Congress.

Resolved, That it is the opinion of this meeting, that the claims of Cumberland county, should be favorably considered in said Convention; and for that purpose, in view of the facts above suggested, this meeting presents to the Whigs of this district and to the Convention, the name of our neighbor and citizen, faithful and long tried public servant, Col. MILTON KING.

Resolved, That the following gentlemen be appointed delegates to the Convention, whenever and wherever it meets, to wit: Edward W. Newby, Dr. Joel Owsley, Col. Robert Elliott, James H. Richey, Col. Milton Smiley, Maj. Jos. S. Bledsoe, Capt. A. G. Waggoner, Wm. R. Hill, Hon. John M. Emerson, and Richard H. Howard, who are requested to use all fair means to secure the nomination of Col. King, and if unsuccessful, then in their discretion to nominate some other suitable candidate.

Resolved, That these proceedings be published in the Danville Tribune, Frankfort Commonwealth and Somerset Gazette.

On motion the meeting adjourned.
LEWEL WILLIAMS, Clerk.

LOUISVILLE CORRESPONDENCE.
LOUISVILLE, April 18, 1853.

MESSRS. EDITORS:—In the Times of Sunday last, I see a letter from your city headed "Danville Correspondence."

The caption of said letter struck me quite forcibly, and I eagerly read the article. I must say I read it with interest, expecting to receive thereby a treat—a literary feast—and I did. Though much disappointed, still I found much to amuse, and cannot say that I found much to condemn; less to approve of. If there was anything in that document worthy of either, you must excuse me, as I was utterly unable to find it. The author is not a poet, and I believe, is not the offspring of a poet, never to my knowledge attempted to write poetry, yet he is decidedly a poetical genius, and likes the wit of others admirably.

The letter in question begins with poetry, and the author's taste there set forth, is brilliantly illuminated with quotations from the names of several of Danville's most respected citizens. I presume this is all well enough—perhaps intellectual, showing great respect for those whose names are thus mockingly used. These, however, is of but little moment, and we leave the poetical selections of the author without comment.

The document is a tissue of stuff, and from it a stranger would suppose its author was built up of the same material. He is not; but in his way is quite a sensible gentleman, rather fond of fun, and often discards good sense and judgment in obtaining it. He much reminds us of the snake in the grass (though not as cunning) on an April day, rain, hail, &c., this, that and the other. He may get over this.

The tone of the letter is quite Democratic, and when his poetical quotations cease, and his punning on "Uncle Jack" becomes even to himself a bore, he pitches into the political tide quite lustily. But here his statements are ridiculous, and we must say without truth. To have a good memory is quite necessary when a man wishes to refer to past events, and "Jefferson" should stop and think before he lets loose the "valve" of his gassy brain. He enumerates the number of Democrats who are in office in Danville and Boyle county, and foolishly attributes their election to office to the gaining strength of Locofocoism. The individuals named, are we well acquainted with, and though of a different political family, are gentlemen, and deserving of the offices their Whig friends have given them—and I doubt not the paragraph in the "Jeffersonian" letter which mentions them. Certainly Prof. Scott is under lasting obligations to him; and the "Circuit Court Derby" his, obediently.

The races alluded to were not political contests, and the mere mention of such a thing in Boyle county is ridiculous, but as Jefferson was pregnant with something, something had to come, and the Times of this city contains it. To some extent Jefferson is excusable. Ist, perhaps he is not acquainted with the circumstances, and secondly some will attribute to ignorance altogether; yet this last charge would not be correct, for he is one before whom

"Stern Governors grow blind or blind When these before their eyes are set."

We are confident that he is rather abrupt in many things that he asserts—and "ere this has seen the error of his way" and will retract his steps, for we would dislike to think that

"His tongue has learned with hold address To scold at earthly things—but truth."

Respectfully
WASHINGTON.

For the Kentucky Tribune.
OLD CUMBERLAND.

DEAR SIR:—As we have to elect a member to Congress at the ensuing August election, and the claims of several individuals, in the different counties, composing the district, have been put before the public, we claim it right that "Old Cumberland" should set forth her claims in the person of Col. MILTON KING, an old veteran in the Whig cause, and whose talents, and weight of character should warmly recommend him to the whole district. Cumberland county was organized in 1793, and has been Whig all the time, and has been rightfully dominated the banner country, yet she has never before set up any claims. We think it due her in the present canvass to have her claims set before the public, especially in the name of one so eminently qualified to fill that office as Col. King. Cumberland will rally her whole strength up any one who may have the track, and while there are several claims set up, Old Cumberland will submit her claims to the choice of a Convention.

Yours, &c.
WHIGS OF CUMBERLAND.

For the Kentucky Tribune.
MESSRS. EDITORS:

For about thirty years, I have been a staunch, firm, consistent and hearty Democrat—one of the old-fashioned, Jeffersonian, Republican sort—always firm and true to the faith delivered to us by our fathers—and I confess that I was more than "disgusted" at reading a letter published in your paper of the 15th of April, 1853, over the signature of Milton Jackson Durham, Esq., pro-claiming Attorney for the Town of Danville.

Mr. Durham informs the people of the county of Boyle—and the rest of mankind,—"that he had been frequently asked, within the last few days, if the Democratic party did not intend to run a candidate for the Legislature this year, as there are two Whigs running, and I had been further asked if I did not intend to run, in the event that both candidates continued to run."

Both of which questions he answers in the negative—and says, he thinks the Democracy "desire to see the great question of Temperance, of license and Anti-License tested in this county."

This is a strange and singular pro-claimment. His entire letter is a peculiar compound—without reason, rhyme, judgment or taste.

Mr. Durham's pro-claimment was uncalculated for, unprovoked, unsolicited, is unsatisfactory, and may be without truth. It is a most delectable specimen of conceit, egotism and arrogance. But one thing is certain, that it was without authority, either direct or indirect, remote or contingent, as far as the Democracy is concerned, and ever since he issued his pro-claimment, he has been personally endeavoring to get Democrats not to commit themselves in the race—for fear "a Democrat might run."

I would ask who made him King over Israel, or the mouth piece of the Democracy? Does he claim it by divine right? If he were a Prophet Priest or King, he could not speak with a more patronizing and presumptuous air than he has. The Democracy party needs no such volunteer "chameleon" to proclaim its creed, purposes or intentions. When the Democracy wish a Moses, or an Aaron, they know upon whom to call—they will never select a "Judas" or a "Peter" nor yet any "doubting Thomas" to be their exponent.

In all conscience, what was the occasion of the issuing of the Durham pro-claimment?

In January last, Mr. Durham informed the people, through your paper, that he would not run for the Legislature this year; then why the necessity of informing them of the same fact again. Was it merely for the pleasure of seeing his name in print? He says he has been asked if the Democracy intended to present a candidate as there were two Whigs running—"I wonder if he is the only man who has been asked the same question." And he has answered it in print—of course, upon authority, either expressed or implied—else why should he have answered it at all.

The truth is, the Democracy of the county were once disposed to do all they could for Mr. Durham; but that day has passed. He has forfeited their friendship, and they have lost confidence in him. He worships strange idols, and is as easily led by a "Dime" as a boy can be run from a grave-yard.

If you were to hold up a "Quarter" before his eyes, he would become immediately "magnetized," and you could lead him whither-soever you pleased.

In the name of the Democracy party, I repudiate him, I deny his right to speak for them, lest, when you least expect it, you may be deceived.

If Mr. Durham desires to know how long the writer of this article has been a Democrat, he can inform himself by calling on the Editor.

A DEMOCRAT SINCE 1824.

ANOTHER MAIL ROBBER.—We have received a communication from Columbia, Ky., requesting us to guard the public against one Hiram K. Skoon. The writers say that he has repeatedly robbed the post-office at that place and on the night of the 15th of December broke in and stole a letter containing a considerable amount of money. He has escaped from the officers.

Skoon was a member of the Masonic Lodge in Columbia, but has since been expelled and deprived of all the rights and privileges of the order. He is about 25 years of age, 6 feet 2 inches high, walks erect, has light hair, light complexion, by occupation a saddler, and has been engaged in a liquor store. It is reported that he has been lately a guard in the Missouri penitentiary, at Jefferson City, but more recently was at St. Louis. The communication is signed by Messrs. T. Cravens, Ed. Wheat, H. W. Wilson, R. L. Jones, and N. Montgomery, a committee appointed by the Masonic Lodge.

Lou. Journal.

The New York Herald thus considers the position and peril of the Democracy. We make the following extract from their editorial of Saturday last:

Can General Pierce hold his Administration, and his party together upon so frail a platform as this—to the victors belong the spoils? As far as he has gone, he has evidently been distributing the plunder to the end, if possible, of holding the present cumbersome and incongruous materials of the Democratic party together.

The Democratic party cannot be held together upon the cohesive power of public plunder. Experience has established the fact that the possession of the spoils is an element of weakness, and not of strength of the party in power. However judiciously divided, the patronage will not hold out. The minority of the applicants are appointed and the majority are disappointed. Of this majority there have been, and ever will be, found a sufficient amount of loose floating materials to form the balance of power in the next succeeding general election.

The Herald hereupon assumes that vital unity can best be secured by General Pierce keeping the Presidency in his own hands—which he has done thus far. The Herald adds:

There are certain indications of a conspiracy to use Gen. Pierce as the tool of certain aspirants. Let him stand fast—He must be the President or a cipher. The signs of the times indicate an approaching coup d'etat at Washington.

AGRICULTURAL

How to Raise Fruit Every Year.

A highly understood, low trees, unless absolutely dead or rotten, need occupy ground without yielding a plentiful crop. After long and varied experiments, I gradually adapted the following mode. As soon as the winter has sufficiently disappeared, and before sap ascends, I examine my trees. Every dead branch is lopped off; then, after the sap has risen, I cut away all the other branches having none on, and also the extremity of every limb the low part of which bears a considerable number of buds, thus concentrating the sap of the tree upon the maturation of its fruits, and saving what would be a useless expenditure of strength. In the quince, apricot and peach trees, this is very important; as these are very apt to be luxuriant in leaves and destitute of fruit. You may think this injures the trees, but it does not; for you will find trees laden with fruit which formerly yielded nothing. Of course, all other well known precautions must be attended to, such as cutting out worms from the roots, placing old iron on the limbs, which acts as a tonic to the sap, &c. Try it, ye who have failed in raising fruit.

FARMERS, LOOK AT THIS.

The farmers of Indiana will remember what a difficulty they had last spring in getting their corn to come up right. Many farmers had to plant a second and third time. But I was well aware of the difficulty beforehand. I ascertained it by the following experiment: I took one hundred grains of fifty different ears and put them in a pan of dirt, and set them by the fire to keep them sufficiently warm. The result of this experiment was, that only about half of the grains sprouted. I repeated the experiment several times with like results. This spring I have repeated the experiment several times, and find that nearly every grain sprouts well, there being only three or four grains out of one hundred that would not come up. So I think the farmers this spring need have no fear on this point. By making similar experiments, the farmers even of Wayne county may save several bushels of seed corn. I hope the farmers of Indiana will try the experiment for themselves.—[A. Farmer.]

How to Judge Cattle.

In all domestic animals, the skin or hide forms one of the best means by which to estimate their future properties. In the handling of even if the hide be found soft and silky to the touch it affords a tendency to take meat. A horse having a perfect neck, will have a thick loose skin, flowing as it were, on a layer of soft fat, yielding to the softest pressure, and springs outward towards the finger like a piece of leather. Such a skin will be usually covered with an abundance of soft glossy hair, feeling like a bed of moss, and is for this reason always termed mossy skin. A thick, set, hard, short hair, always hangs as hard and indicates a hard feeder.
